

Outside the Bottle: 7 Tailgating-Approved Boxed and Canned Wines

by Anna Monette Roberts 10/05/14

Beer isn't the only thing you can bring to a tailgate, plus it's not the only thing that should be paired with barbecue. We tried 11 boxed and canned wines to bring you the ones that are tailgating-approved as well as the ones to avoid (unless it's the fourth quarter).

Bridge Lane 2013 White Blend ($40 For 3 Liters)

What is a white blend, you may ask? The makers include all the grapes and percentages used on the label, but flavor-wise, it's as if Riesling and Chardonnay (minus the oak) had a baby. The box contains four bottles worth, which you're going to need. It's so clean and crisp, you might as well have picked a perfectly ripe green apple and chowed down. It's near impossible not to drink lots and lots of this.
